

Peanut & Tree Nut-Free Safe Snacks

As parents and members of the school community, we try to be very cautious when giving a list of "safe packaged food". This is because ingredient lists change, sometimes often, and there is currently new legislation to attempt to ensure that manufacturers place all of their ingredients on packaging but this is not always reliable nor have all manufacturers complied. As a rule of thumb there are almost no brands that are safe across the whole brand. Some manufacturers do a great job and actually make products that have nuts, in a completely separate facility to ensure safety. The best example of this is that Cheerios are made in a different facility than the Honey Nut Cheerios. However some manufacturers do not use a different facility and therefore the label may read "made in a facility that also processes nuts". If we find this on a label, we do not use that food product. When in doubt, call the manufacturer .

Most large food manufacturers like those listed below are aware of people that have food allergies and do a good job labeling their products. Unfortunately then, we tend not to use homemade or locally produced foods where they might not label to the extent that we need.

We have put together a list that is only as current as today's date. We cannot stress enough the importance of label reading every time you purchase and pack. All snacks that contain peanuts and/or tree nuts and their derivatives are unsafe. In addition to those snacks, any products with labels stating "may contain traces of peanuts or tree nuts" or "processed in a plant that process peanuts or tree nuts" are considered unsafe.
