CURIOSITY

What can you do to promote curiosity at home?

Wonder Walk - Bring a tablet or notebook and teach your child how to take notes on wonderings and observations.

Book Basket - Create a basket of books on topics your child is wondering about.

Neighborhood Walk - Go on a walk around the neighborhood as a family and stop and jot down what you observe.

Curiosity Window - Use tape and draw a box in a window; put markers and pens and index cards near the window so your child can look out the window and take notes on what he or she sees.

Curiosity Tour - Have each family member come up with one question he or she has about the world. Then go to the library together to find out answers.

W.I.C.O.R

WICOR is an acronym for strategies used in AVID classrooms. The letters stand for Writing, Inquiry, Collaboration, Organization, and Reading.

In AVID classrooms, Inquiry refers to the asking and answering of high level questions. Inquiry activities at school might look like Socratic Seminars, Philosophical Chairs, Quick-writes, chalk talks, etc.

At home, increasing the amount of Inquiry will involve asking high level questions and having deep conversations about them.

These conversations could be about the deeper meaning of a movie, the figurative language in a song, the implications of a current event, the intersection of science and society, the importance of education, the value of honesty, and more. Connection to Home: Whenever you are in the car, in a store, at the beach, at a museum, at the library, there are opportunities to use Inquiry with your child. You can have a variety of high level conversations in the car about something on the radio, a business that you just drove past, or even a baseball or soccer game.

Stay tuned to learning about each letter of W.I.C.O.R in the weeks to come.
