MISSION STATEMENT

To prepare students for informed decision-making, effective citizenships, personal achievements, higher education, and rewarding careers. systems

Monroe High School- John D. Hodges founded the first Monroe High School in 1875. It was a private co-educational school located on Lancaster Avenue. It was somewhat revolutionary in that it was co-educational. Around the turn of the century, this building burned down.

The Monroe City Schools were originally chartered by the N.C. State Legislature on February 25, 1897. In 1900 the City of Monroe built a new two-story structure that was later to be known as John D. Hodges School. Monroe was conducted at this location until 1914 when it was moved into the old county home property on Lancaster Avenue where Walter Bickett is presently located. This time period was referred to as "the poor house era" of the Monroe High School.
